Project

Field(s)	Working with new audiences, collecting and facilitating personal narratives from three generations and producing seminars, exhibits and publications
Description	Identity on the Line is a comprehensive cooperation project between cultural history museums, working together with the purpose to gather, produce and facilitate new knowledge about the possibilities of museum and other professionals in contributing to mutual understanding in societies by using personal narratives about difficult, taboo-related issues. Not addressed and not articulated in a proper way, such issues might have long term-consequences for several generations to come. The project´s highest goal is to uncover, highlight and convey basic identity-forming and identity-threatening aspects applying to all human beings, regardless historical event, country or culture. By working with and facilitating knowledge to new audiences, the partners will simultaneously gather theoretical and practical knowledge about the working processes, their advantages and pitfalls, and this knowledge will be transferred directly to other museums professionals as well as professionals from other fields of study.

Other

	We have come quite far in the application process, but "lost" suddenly a partner due to unforeseen events.
...	We now look for one or two new partners who can set aside a couple of weeks immediately to work on an own project draft. We have clearly defined all needs and can help with the project description and budget.
